Submission to the Australian Heritage Council - Greater Blue Mountains Area - Additional heritage values and areas, National Heritage assessment

Submission from the Wilderness Society. For more information please contact Tim Beshara, Manager of Policy and Strategy (Tim.Beshara@wilderness.org.au) or Victoria Jack, NSW Campaign Manager (Victoria.Jack@wilderness.org.au)

Support for the expansion of the National Heritage Listing from the Wilderness Society and our supporters

The Wilderness Society supports the nomination to include additional values and areas in the National Heritage listing of the Greater Blue Mountains. We call for:

- The National Heritage listing to be expanded to cover the nominated additional areas
- The National Heritage listing to be expanded to recognise nominated additional values, including cultural heritage and geodiversity
- Free, Prior and Informed Consent for these changes must be sought from relevant First Nations groups
- Additions made to the eight protected areas since the World Heritage listing should be added to the World Heritage Area now, as permitted by the World Heritage Convention for minor changes

We wrote to our supporters and asked them if they would lend their support to this submission. More than 3000 signed on in the space of a week, which was all the time available to us given the Wilderness Society was not notified about the consultation period until half of it had passed. The names and postcodes of supporters who signed on are included in the appendix.

Given the short deadline for this consultation, as part of an outlandishly deferred assessment process, we have not provided a detailed site and values assessment. Instead, we provide some comments about key elements of the nomination and also on the extended nomination process itself. However, we note that a detailed case for the nomination of additional areas and values has been put forward in the Values for a new generation: Greater Blue Mountains World Heritage Area report. The Wilderness Society is supportive of key points made in this report and notes that the Greater Blue Mountains site is of global significance for values (and for locations) beyond those for which it is currently listed.

Background comments: Unfinished business

The tortuous World Heritage listing process and the subsequent (and as-yet-to-be-met) promise of a broader National Heritage assessment of the Greater Blue Mountains Area reflects poorly on the approach of Australia and international institutions to the identification, and subsequent protection and management, of heritage values. As a result, the full range of values and locations within the Greater Blue Mountains Area, which are objectively of global significance in many cases and national significance in others, are not currently inscribed within the national and world heritage listings.

The context under which the Greater Blue Mountains was inscribed on the World Heritage List was in response to a request for Australia to put forward a serial property nomination covering a broad range of sites regarding eucalyptus diversity. In response to this request, Australia put forward the Greater Blue Mountains Area as a mixed cultural and natural heritage property, and initially the IUCN and World Heritage committee were unsatisfied as the nomination did not represent a broader serial nomination based on eucalypt values. As a negotiated outcome, ultimately the World Heritage committee accepted the nomination on a narrow range of criteria and indicated that future eucalypt sites would be nominated at a later date.

ICOMOS, at the time, rejected the cultural heritage elements based on what in hindsight could only be described as a highly colonialist “stones and bones” view of cultural heritage, in that they could not see the connection between modern Aboriginal culture and the cultural landscape elements articulated in the nomination. ICOMOS’s specific comments were: “The State Party cites only criterion vi for inscription as a cultural property, justifying it in terms of ‘the intense inter-relationship of nature and people over tens of thousands of years.’ Whilst this is incontestable, there is a serious discontinuity in that inter-relationship. The long-lived Aboriginal culture achieved a perfect symbiotic relationship with the entire landscape from the mountains to the valley bottoms, on which its physical impact was minimal. The European relationship, by contrast, virtually destroyed the Aboriginal system.”

The approach by ICOMOS misconceived the history of First Nations people in the area from the time since colonisation until the present day, and in doing so massively undervalued the potential global significance of the cultural landscape. The emergence of an Australian National Heritage scheme as part of the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act was supposed to fill the gap left by this incongruous approach taken by ICOMOS, but the initial promise to incorporate these values into the National Heritage listing still remains unfulfilled more than 17 years after the initial National Heritage nomination.

The site is of global significance for values (and for locations) beyond those for which it is currently listed. The context for which the site was first put forward for the World Heritage list, i.e. in place of a serial eucalypt property, meant that there was not due attention given, we believe, to the broader biodiversity and natural heritage values. As such, the current listing is overly narrow. We believe that the site is best considered in a global context as an outstanding example of an Old, Climatically-Buffered, Infertile Landscape (OCBIL), such as SW Western Australia or the Cape Region of South Africa, that has high levels of species richness, diversity and endemism associated with the region—being both an evolutionary museum and evolutionary cradle. The Greater Blue Mountains Area displays these features and this is expressed not just through plants with associated key functional attributes (sclerophylly, fire tolerance, particular flowering systems), but also in the associated fauna, such as nectivorous birds and mammals. The Blue Mountains are particularly rich for honeyeaters, as well as nectivorous or sap-eating mammals, such as gliders. Listing the site on plant diversity alone diminishes its ecological and evolutionary value.

Likewise, the inadequate previous assessment of the natural values overlooked key landscape elements such as aesthetic and geoheritage values. Both of these also sit well within the OCBIL context related to the site, being situated on an old dissected sandstone geological foundation.

The Wilderness Society would like to see this National Heritage Assessment process rectify shortcomings in the values and extent of the previous listing. The full range of areas and values presented in the draft assessment should be included. We also call for the funding of cultural heritage assessments, to be undertaken in concert with Traditional Owners and Custodians, to advance the Cultural Heritage listing. We also call for this to be broadened to specifically include the history of First Nations people since colonisation to the present day. Free, Prior and Informed Consent must be sought not just for the cultural assessment process, but also for the wider nomination, assessment and listing for any other values and locations.

Wider consequences for the delayed assessment

There is no valid excuse for the assessment and nomination to have not progressed on any front since the nomination in 2005. The site and the values have sat on the Priority Assessment List for most of that time. It is our understanding that various state and federal governments were concerned that advancing the assessment would impinge upon major developments such as the Western Sydney Airport, the proposed (and unjustified) raising of Warragamba Dam, and coal mine expansions.

The successive failure of Commonwealth governments to progress the nomination and assessment appears to be an act of nonfeasance; that is, the willful non-performance of a clear statutory duty. It's difficult to interpret the failure to progress the nomination despite it being on the Priority Assessment List for almost 15 years as anything other than a deliberate decision to not comply with the legislative framework through inaction. It can be a series of minor actions by a government that underlie this kind of inaction—such as constraining funding, refusing to make clear decisions, and hinting towards departments that certain actions should be unofficially deprioritised (despite being officially prioritised). In relation to heritage protections, failing to progress nominations is a back door mechanism to cut “green tape”; a mechanism used by governments who look for every pathway to prioritise economic advantage above all. We hope that examples of systematic nonfeasance in relation to EPBC heritage listing, where non-decisions that appear to favour proponents, would be within the remit of a National Anti-Corruption Commission for referral.

Having this nomination and assessment sitting on the shelf for almost 20 years, in effect, and then suddenly enacting a brief window of consultation—without directly notifying stakeholders who had been in communication with the department on this very matter—shows how broken the heritage assessment system currently is. If we had been aware that this nomination was genuinely live, rather than perpetually in stasis, we could have undertaken deep community engagement on it, informing a detailed assessment of all the places and values being considered. The universal environmental community rights—to know about, participate in and challenge environmental decision-making—are required for such a process to be trusted and effective; and they clearly have not been adequately recognised and honoured through this process.

Notwithstanding our concerns about consultation and timeframes, we remain worried that another delay now could mean this nomination spends a further 20 years on the shelf—with these sites and values insufficiently protected from major threats. For instance, despite the NSW Government's involvement in this nomination and support from various Ministers for it to be progressed, some of the nominated areas (i.e. Nullo Mountain and Coricudgy state forests) were recently proposed as sites for major coal mining releases. It took a community campaign by the Wilderness Society, along with groups like Rylstone Coal Free Community Group, to see off that threat (for now)—when it should have been already protected under National or World Heritage listing.

Comments on biodiversity values (including for new places)

Our preference is that the whole listing (for both national and world heritage listing) should be anchored in the site's biodiversity and evolutionary values associated with the Greater Blue Mountains as an outstanding example of an Old, Climatically-Buffered, Infertile landscape. The anchoring of the listing in eucalypts is too narrow. The wider context of the ecological features that evolve in an infertile landscape is more compelling, especially when broadened to include the fauna, such as honeyeaters and gliders. It also better positions the relictual plant species component of the listing, such as the Wollemi Pine and other rainforest elements, into a clearer context through their association with geodiversity (deep canyons and occasional high-fertility geological intrusions) in an otherwise infertile landscape

There is an important opportunity to increase the representativeness of Australia's unique fauna within the world and national heritage listing by clearly including the presence of evolutionarily and functionally distinctive species such as the lyrebird and platypus within the listing.

The specific inclusion of the great honeyeater migration as a feature on the listing should be considered. It is a major Australian natural phenomenon and one of a few examples of mass migration in Australian ecology. Narrow Neck is a site where this phenomenon has been observed and studied for generations.

The Wilderness Society supports all of the sites that have been put forward for addition to the property for biodiversity values. We are especially eager for Nullo Mountain and Coricudgy State Forests to be included.

Comments on geoheritage and historic values

We support the proposed additions of geoheritage and historic values. In regards to history, we believe that listing is also warranted on the basis of botanical and ecological science, nature conservation history and the development of nature-based tourism as key themes. It may be possible to consider including interaction with fire as a key theme (use of fire and firefighting). We would support the post-colonisation role of First Nations people in the Greater Blue Mountains being included here too.

Comments on Indigenous Cultural Values

The Wilderness Society encourages the Commonwealth and State governments to properly fund and support engagement with Traditional Owners and Custodians in relation to the identification, assessment, protection, access and management of cultural values (in addition to other aspects of the nomination). The recommendations below must be subject to the seeking of Free, Prior and Informed Consent from the First Nations peoples of the Blue Mountains, as with all aspects of the nomination.

The assessment must look at the full range of cultural values as they are defined and considered by the First Nations People of the Greater Blue Mountains. Any historical narrative development must not overlook sites such as The Gully, which clearly demonstrates ongoing connection to Country in a colonial society, but also the full range of Frontier War aspects right around the perimeter of and throughout the property. Likewise, facets of post-colonial life such the well-documented efforts at integration in the Burraborang Valley should also be incorporated.

If the original perception of ICOMOS was to carry through to a modern assessment of the cultural values, it would overlook the substantial contribution to post-colonial Australian history made by First Nations people in the Greater Blue Mountains. However, this requires less of a focus on clearly demarcated cultural sites such as art sites and caves and more of an understanding of the connection between stories and places. Without a more nuanced approach to heritage assessment, the entire system will be blind to this period of history for the Australian landmass and for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.
